2 The present application does not meet the criteria of Article 33(1) PCT, because the subject-matter of claims 1 and 8 is not new in the sense of Article 33(2) PCT:

2.1 Document D1 discloses (the references in parentheses applying to this document):

Device for creating summaries of multimedia documents (abstract, lines 1 to 2) comprising a storage means and means enabling a user to view a multimedia document (implicit in the abstract),

characterized in that it comprises

- means of automatically weighting multimedia documents stored on the storage means ("the importance score of an image sequence can be calculated" - abstract lines 7 to 10 - this clearly discloses a means for automatically weighting - using a score - multimedia contents, hence documents, which are implicitly stored on a storage means) according to the frequency with which the different stored documents are viewed by said user (according to the abstract the score attributed is derived from a user profile and from content profiles; the use of the frequency of visualization is clarified on page 392, left-hand column, lines 31 to 40: when - hence every time as indicated by the formula - a user views a video segment the corresponding content profile is refined using the user profile; therefore the content profile is changed according to the frequency with which the document is viewed by the user; thus the importance score depends upon the frequency with which the document is viewed by the user; and thus we have

- means of automatically weighting documents according to the frequency with which the different documents are viewed by the user; moreover this feature is well-known in the field of user-profiles - the most basic version of a user profile is based on frequency of access to contents of a certain type in the past - refer also to D3, page 595, left-hand column, lines 6 to 10),
- means of creating a summary of the multimedia documents stored on the storage means according to the weighting assigned to each multimedia document (abstract, lines 10 to 14).

These are all the features of independent claim 1, it follows that the subject-matter of independent claim 1 is not novel.

2.2 Independent claim 8 describes a method with features that correspond to those of the system of independent claim 1. It follows that independent claim 8 is not novel for the same reasons as given above for independent claim 1.

3 Dependent claims 2-7 do not contain any features which, in combination with the features of any claim to which they refer, meet the requirements of the PCT in respect of novelty (Article 33(2) PCT), the subject-matter of said dependent claims being disclosed in document D1 (refer to the references to this document provided below). D1 discloses that:

- a summary is only created for the documents for which the weighting coefficient is greater than a predefined threshold (claim 2 - disclosed in the abstract, lines 10 to 14)
- the documents are weighted according to their type (claim 3 - disclosed in "predefined keywords" in the abstract and in "similar content" on page 391,

- right-hand column lines 18 to 21)
- the documents are divided in scenes and scenes are weighted (claim 4 - disclosed on page 391, left-hand column, lines 4 to 6)
  - the summary is created according to the weighting assigned to the scenes (claim 5 - disclosed on page 391, left-hand column, lines 25 to 30)
  - the duration of the summary is adapted according to the weighting assigned to each document and to each scene (claim 6 - page 291, left-hand column, lines 25 to 30 and figure 1 implicitly disclose this possibility; note moreover that the relation of weighting and duration is well known in the field - refer to D2, page 269, left-hand column, lines 7 to 12)
  - the summaries are stored in storing means (claim 7 - this is implicit on page 391, left-hand column, lines 25 to 30: a summary is created, it must accordingly be stored somewhere)
